

5 WAYS OWNERS CAN COMMUNICATE WITH RENTERS AFTER THEY BOOK YOUR RV

CALL OR TEXT

Provide your phone number for them to reach out to you before and after their RV rental period.

CREATE A GUIDEBOOK

Creating a guidebook about your specific RV can help if they are in a location where texting or service isn't an option.

WEBSITE

Some RV owners have their own website that explains further detail about their RV rental or shows multiple RV coaches available to rent.

TRAINING VIDEOS

Some renters prefer watching videos. Creating short clips about different aspects of the coach can help people navigate when they forget how you did the walkthrough.

CHECKLISTS

Create a checklist for both "once you arrive at a campsite", and one for "packing up to leave".

CONCLUSION

Communicating with your RV renters can be easy with these different options. One of these methods is bound to appeal to your renters to understand the quirks and unique ways to operate your coach.
